The euthanasia of a former University research monkey sparked heated debate among researchers and animal rights activists (top left cluster), and students protested again when the Central Intelligence Agency came to campus to conduct employment recruiting interviews (top right). Alton Baker park proved a good study escape before the rains came. Office of Public Safety officer Patricia Fuller faithfully issued citations to students who were less than faithful in plugging the meters, and the Native American Student Union had a Pow Wow to promote its varied cultures and shared heritage.
