Senators, board members named

By Kelvin Wee
Emerald Managing Editor

Ten Student Senate and all four EMU Board of Directors seats were confirmed in the ASUO Primary Elections held Tuesday and Wednesday.

All Associated Students President's Advisory Council, and three Student Senate seats are still up for grabs.

The biggest vote grabbers in those contests will meet in the General Elections to be held April 26 and 27.

Student Senate Seat 1 went to Kim Cooper with 408 votes. Laura DeLeone won Student Senate Seat 2 with 336 votes and Dalene Lovie took Seat 3 with 287 votes. Darin Linnman received 475 votes on his solo bid for Seat 4.

Two incumbents, Tiffany Weed and Michael Lee, took Seats 6 and 9 respectively. Weed won her seat with 211 votes, and Lee his with 267.

"I feel like doing cartwheels down the street," Weed said. She added one of her goals will be to work on the issue of safety and lighting on campus.

Lee reacted with similar glee. "This feels great," he said. "I've been campaigning very hard." He added he plans to work on revamping the teacher evaluations and the Riverfront Research Park Project.

Student Senate Seat 11 went to Jeff Johnson with 139 votes; Andrew Funderburg won Seat 13 with 107 votes; Brian Hoop took Seat 14 with 144 votes; and, David Johnson got Seat 17 with 129 votes.

Student Senate candidates for seats 5, 7 and 12 will meet in the General Elections.

Philip Zerbo and Mike Colson will contest for Seat 5; Clay Kinney and Tiffany Davidson for Seat 7; and, Mike Meyers and Chris Simmons for Seat 12.

Zerbo led Seat 5 with 84 votes and Colson received 79. Davidson led Seat 7 with 110 votes and Kinney took 81. Seat 12 saw Simons with 60 votes and Meyers with 38.

"It's going to be a good race," said Colson, also president of the University Democrats.

"We going to try to do a little footwork and talk to as many people as we can and give them the reason to vote for us," he said.

Zerbo on the other hand was not as impressed. "Substance won over cute posters," he said.

Four ASPAC candidates will meet in the General Elections to vie for the two available seats. They are Bethany Strasburg (511), Ann Reed (867), Bret Jordan (1,139) and Kari Anderson (1,355).

Mary Koroloff ran uncontested for the one-year EMU Board seat and won with 2,114 votes.

The EMU Board two-year seats went to Scott Brown with 1,253 votes, Justin McKenna with 1,663 votes and Brendan Mulligan with 1,236 votes.

didates who ran for office.

"It was important that they got their views out," Clark said. "Throughout the campaigns they all got their messages out and that says a lot for all of them."

But for now, both candidates and their supporters were happy that the race "was over" and at the large voter turnout at the polls.

Student turnout at this year's primary was 21 percent, an increase of 11 percent from last year's spring elections. It also was an evening to remember for many of the candidates recommended by the Greek Endorsement Committee.

According to both candidates, the victory was a result of everyone's efforts.

"It just wasn't Scott and I," Clark said. "It was the people who got our message out and the people who came out and voted for us."

"I can't breathe," exclaimed

Traci Manning, one of the campaign managers for Clark/Wyckoff. "It's scary but it's only just begun!"

For Hughes and Kirk, however, the results of the evening were disappointing.

"It's our intention to file charges of campaign violations tomorrow," Hughes said. "There's been a lot of irregularities in this campaign, and we feel that it needs to be investigated."

Hughes refused to elaborate further on his comment.

The Kaniewski/McRae ticket seemed to take the election results in stride.

"We're disappointed that the voters chose a ticket without a platform," McRae said. "We wish that there had been a run-off even if we hadn't been in it."

"But it's been a great experience," he said. "We had a wonderful time, and we're definitely going to be involved in student politics next year."

Shoup (711) and Kevin Allen (440).

Neely said she was happy with her finish in the IFC race.

"It just goes to who that a lot of people care what happens on the IFC," she said. "I feel I've earned my position (among the eight candidates)."

Neely added she expected the general election to be a close race, but that she saw it as a "challenge."

"Regardless of how (the general election) turns out, I think we're going to have a good, well-represented IFC," she said.

Allen also said he was pleased with making the general election cutoff, and added that he expected his campaign to get stronger.

"I think it's just a matter of going out and talking with more people," he said. "I'm going to talk with a lot of student groups next week."

An upset Shoup, when asked about the election, responded, "I have nothing to say to you."

Morales and the four top finishers in the one-year seat general election race will join current IFC members Jack Maynard and Freddie Vilches to form next year's seven-member committee.
