

Mary DeMocker

Mary DeMocker began playing the classical harp at age nine and the folk harp at age 22.

She has performed street music with both types of harps, and has participated in the Village Voice Street Musician's Fair in New York City.

In the spring of 1988, DeMocker won a Ruth Lorraine Close Harp scholarship for study at the University of Oregon with Sally Maxwell. That spring she was also a recipient of the New York State Council on the Arts LIFT grant for a series of concerts in nursing homes. In the future, DeMocker plans to explore the realm of electro-acoustic harp music with multi-media performance, using contemporary as well as original composition.

Evan Carawan

Evan Carawan, a performer whose specialty is the hammer dulcimer, "will take you away with him on a magic journey of regions hitherto uncharted," according to a recent publication.

Carawan has been performing on the hammered dulcimer since the age of nine. At age 14 he toured Germany with his parents, Guy and Candie Carawan. Evan's mastery of the guitar can be heard on the recordings "Guy and Evan Carawan," "Music for the Hammered Dulcimer," and on "Building the Perfect Clock," which is Carawan's own cassette tape. Carawan also sings traditional songs of America and the British Isles.
