We at the Cultural Forum are extremely concerned by the rise in hate crimes in our community. Death threats against gay people, assaults and rape of women, harassment of people of color and many other incidents have all taken place on our campus this year. We believe it is time for everyone who is concerned to express their condemnation of all hate crimes in no unclear terms.

The Cultural forum hopes at least to break the silence and begin to focus attention on the need to seriously address the growing problems of hate-based attacks, as well as complacency and complicit silence on the part of the community. Once the silence is broken, perhaps effective steps can be taken to better educate ourselves about the wealth of diversity that characterizes the best in our community.
