

Mayfest brings week of activities

Mayfest '89, the University's week-long celebration of spring, started Saturday and will run until Parents' Weekend, Friday through Sunday, May 19-21.

Parents' Weekend features an awards luncheon, the annual canoe fete and a brunch for all parents. Also on tap are faculty lectures, campus tours and various music, dance and theatre performances.

Mayfest activities include a street fair, noontime entertainment and the Willamette Valley Folk Festival.

Except as noted, all events are free and open to the public.

Parents' Weekend starts Friday, with parents invited to attend classes throughout the day. Registration is scheduled from 4-6:30 p.m. in the EMU.

Registration for Parents' Weekend costs $3 per person. The awards luncheon costs an additional $6 and the brunch costs $5 per person.

A Jazz Spectacular will be presented from 7-10 p.m. Friday in the EMU Ballroom. It will feature the Leningrad Dixieland Jazz Band on tour from the Soviet Union.

At noon Saturday, outstanding student leaders will be honored during an all-University awards luncheon in the Memorial Quadrangle between the Knight Library and the Museum of Art. The canoe fete, and annual parade of colorful floats, will take place at 3 p.m. Saturday in the Millrace, north of campus along Franklin Boulevard.

The official dedication and renaming of Marian Hall for Harold "Pat" Riley, a University business student killed in action during World War II, is scheduled at 5 p.m. Saturday in the courtyard of the residence hall.

On Sunday, a brunch for parents will be held in the EMU. The speaker will be James Boren, an associate English professor. The University Song and Dance troupe will perform.

Other Mayfest highlights include:

- Free Noontime Entertainment in the EMU Courtyard on Wednesday and Thursday. Eagle Park Slim, Peter Thomas and Glen Falkenburg will perform.

- A Street Fair, open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday through Friday, between University and Kincaid streets. It features crafts, food and information booths.

- The Willamette Valley Folk Festival, sponsored by the EMU Cultural Forum, will take place on the EMU East Lawn on Friday through Sunday.
