International Diplomats expelled

MOSCOW (AP) — Britain ordered eight Soviet diplomats and three journalists out of the country for alleged espionage, and the Soviet Union responded with an identical set of expulsions, the British Embassy said Sunday.

"It's a mirror-image act of retaliation," Sir Roderic Braithwaite, Britain's ambassador to Moscow, told a news conference.

Britain said its expulsions were legitimate and that the Soviet response was unjustified. The Soviet Union had no immediate comment on either set of expulsions.

On Friday, Soviet Ambassador Leonid Zamyatin was called to the British Foreign Office in London and told that 11 Soviets were being expelled for "activities incompatible with their status," a Foreign Office spokesman said.

The spokesman would not detail the specific allegations, but "incompatible activities" is diplomatic parlance for espionage.

The Foreign Office spokesman said Britain had not planned to make public the expulsions and did so only after the Soviets retaliated.

On Saturday night, Braithwaite was summoned to the Soviet Foreign Ministry and told that 11 Britons were being expelled, the British Embassy's political counselor, Roderic Lyne, said.

In each case, eight diplomats and three journalists were expelled, Lyne said. Each group was given 14 days to leave the country.

In London, Sir Geoffrey Howe, Britain's foreign minister, called Britain's action "a measured action in respect of established misbehavior."

Chinese students protest in Salem

SALEM (AP) — About 100 Chinese students gathered on the Capitol steps in Salem while another 200 met at Portland State University in demonstrations Saturday to show support for student protests in their Asian homeland.

Also, more than 200 members of the Chinese Association of Student Scholars at Oregon State University voted overwhelmingly Saturday night to demand the resignation of Chinese Premier Li Peng.

The demonstrations coincided with a larger-scale march by 3,500 students on the Chinese embassy in Washington. The protests came just days after the declaration of martial law in China by the Beijing government.

"We strongly condemn a handful of ill-willed dictators and corrupted bureaucrats headed by Deng Xiaoping (senior Communist Party leader) and Peng, who use armed force to crack down the peaceful students," they said in a statement read at the statehouse about 10 a.m.

The statement also said the students in the United States support the demand for democracy being made by their academic counterparts in Beijing.

The students then marched in a 10-block loop of the downtown area, returning to the Capitol. Some said they planned to drive to Portland, where another demonstration was held at Portland State University.

About 200 students met at Smith Center on the Portland State campus to draft a letter to the Chinese government before marching downtown. In an impromptu effort, the students also collected about $300 to send to the protesters in Beijing for medical aid or whatever is needed, they said.

The letter drafted at Portland State asks that the Chinese government listen to the student protesters and not use force against them. Students also discussed whether the letter should call for the ousting of Li Peng, but there was opposition from some who said that would be too strong.

The Portland march, which began around noon, looped from the campus to the city's Chinatown area and back.

In Corvallis, students drafted a letter that asks for Peng to step down, for troops to leave Beijing, for an end to martial law, for freedom of speech and freedom of the press be given to all in China. The students also demanded that Communist Party General Secretary Zhao Ziyang, who reportedly resigned in recent days, be named new head of the Chinese government.

There are an estimated 40,000 students from the People's Republic of China in the United States. Virtually all are in postgraduate studies, and about half are financially supported by their government. Others have won U.S. scholarships or obtained other outside sponsorship.
