Prominent citizens offer advice

With commencement activities in full swing all across the country, many college graduates are receiving words of advice from those who evidently know what it takes to be a success. Here are some outtakes from recent commencement addresses, which featured nationally-prominent speakers.

"This has been a decade where the trilogy was me, myself and I. We've got to start thinking about us, our community, our country and how we are going to compete. There's never been a time when our country needs you more." Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., Simmons College, Boston

"We're not going to dominate the 21st century like we have the 20th. In fact, we're going to have to compete for most of what we now take for granted, including our standard of living." Lee Iacocca, Chrysler Corporation chairman, Fairleigh Dickinson University, East Rutherford, N.J.

"We're on the verge of becoming the first generation to leave things not as good as we found them." Steven McAuliffe, Concord, N.H. lawyer and husband of teacher-astro- naut Christa McAuliffe, Plymouth State College, Plymouth, N.H.

"What you are, our country will be. You have an absolutely idealistic opportunity to change the world for the better." Victor Kiam, owner of New England Patriots football team and chairman of Remington Electronics, Inc., Bryant College, Smithfield, R.I.

"Do the best you can, no matter how insignificant it may seem at the time. While you may be a lowly foot soldier...no one knows more about solving a problem than the person at the bottom." Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, Rockford College, Rockford, Ill.

"Does our present conservatism stem from a sincere conviction that we need to shift more responsibility from Washington to the grass roots and more from government hands to private hands? Or is it a lofty rationalization for selfishness, for cutting regulations and lowering taxes simply to leave us more money and freedom for our own private pleasure?" Derek Bok, president of Harvard University, George Mason University, Fairfax, Va.

"Success is feeling good about yourself. If you're low on self-esteem, no job or amount of money in the world is going to make you feel good." John J. Curley, chairman, president and chief executive officer of Gannett Co. Inc., Simpson College, Indianola, Iowa

"I happen to believe we Americans are becoming a nation of liars. I, for one, think it's awful. All kinds of people lie...it is the lying at the top levels of our society that concerns me the most, because morality, like water and unlike money, really does trickle down." Jim Lehrer, co-anchor of MacNeil/Lehrer NewsHour, Southern Methodist University, Dallas.
