capturing fifth in the long jump two years ago and sixth in the triple jump at last year's NCAA meet at Hayward Field. Berry qualified for last year's NCAA long jump, but failed to reach the finals due to an ailing hamstring.

The top mark of the day was a leap of 25-11 $\frac{1}{4}$ by Auburn's Boris Goins.

Berry will compete in today's triple jump preliminary in the in an attempt to qualify for Saturday's final.

DeSouza, the second (with Berry) of two of the Ducks' double qualifiers (in both the discus and shot put), posted the fifth-best discus throw of the day, a 182-5 toss, to qualify for Friday's finals behind Tony Washington of Syracuse, who recorded the top throw of the day at 193-5.

DeSouza finished sixth in both the discus and shot at last year's NCAA meet.

Preliminary competition continues today and the remainder of Oregon's 13 qualifiers, in 11 events, will look to advance to the finals to be held Friday and Saturday.

Today's competitors will include Berry and Spencer Williams in the triple jump; Eric Finch and Scott McGee in the hammer throw; Andy Young in the high jump; Alan Foster in the 1,500 meters; deSouza in the shot put; and Brad Hudson in the 5,000 meters.

last year with a surprising sixth-place finish. Allen will probably make the finals, but will be hard-pressed to score. Hyatt, a freshman, is throwing well and may surprise.

Seniors Lise Johansen and Phillis McKinney will be making their first appearance at the national championships today.

With the meet at altitude, Jo-hansen will have to run a tactical 1,500-meter qualifying race, but in all likelihood will have to go below her 4:19.52 PR to make the finals.

McKinney, the school record holder and Pac-10 champ in the triple jump, hopes to use a consistent season and the high altitude - conducive for sprinters and jumpers - to her advantage.

Those competing in trials on Wednesday will compete in finals on Friday, with Thursday's trial competitors seeking placement in Saturday's finals.

Louisiana State is favored to run away with the team race, followed by Texas. Sprint-strong Texas Southern had a good day in qualifying heats with Onyali's 200-meter time and the fastest 400-meter relay time of 43.43, anchored by Onyali.
