Last year's defensive unit often rose to great heights, as in the game against UCLA, but this year coach Rich Brooks worries about the squad's depth.

Ducks look for Musgrave to stay healthy, lead team

By Bob Baum
 Associated Press

To say Bill Musgrave makes a big difference in Oregon's football fortunes is one of the sport's biggest understatements.

With Musgrave at the controls, the Ducks were 6-1 last season, ranked firmly in the Top 20 and apparently headed for their first bowl game in a quarter century.

But when the soft-spoken quarterback, characteristically trying to make a few extra yards against Arizona State, ran head-first into a linebacker and suffered a broken collarbone, the Ducks' season turned into a disaster.

"We collapsed totally," coach Rich Brooks said "In the toilet. I didn't do a good enough job of preparing my football team to play without him."

Oregon lost its final five games to finish 6-6 and, for the second straight season, narrowly missed making it to post-season play.

Now, Musgrave is back and healthy. He's joined by nine other returning starters on offense and he's obviously anxious for his junior season to begin.

"It's hard not to get excited about all the talent that's back there, most of them in their senior year," Musgrave told the touring Pacific-10 Conference Skywriters.

Musgrave said he's anxious for his first chance to carry the ball and show he's not afraid of contact. He also said he's not going to change his style and crumple to the ground in the face of a tackler.

"I'm never going to be a slider," he said.

In his 16 games at Oregon, Musgrave has completed 57 percent of his passes for 2,651 yards and 21 touchdowns.

"If he can stay healthy for an entire season, I think he can re-write the records at Oregon," Brooks said, "and he's had some pretty good quarterbacks ahead of him."
