Ducks drop from AP poll

To the surprise of absolutely nobody, the Oregon Ducks were nowhere to be found on the latest Associated Press Top 25 college football poll.

The Ducks had been rated 22nd in the nation following their impressive 44-6 rout of Big-10 foe Iowa on September 16, but were banished from the poll after Saturday's last-second 18-17 loss to Pacific 10 rival Stanford.

The win earned the Cardinal, 0-2 prior to Saturday's win, one point in the polls. Oregon was rated 31st in the nation.

The Notre Dame Fighting Irish remained atop the poll despite a less-than-impressive win over Big-10 opponent Michigan State on Saturday.

Miami, Fla., was number two in the Nation followed by Nebraska, Auburn, Colorado, Michigan, Clemson, Arkansas, West Virginia and Pittsburgh rounding out the Top 10.

Southern California was the highest rated Pac-10 team this week at 11th after man-handling Ohio State.

The University of Arizona Wildcats, Oregon's next opponent, were rated 17th, Washington State 19th and Washington 21st to round out rated Pac-10 teams.

The Ducks hammered Cardinal QB Brian Johnson (5) all day Saturday, knocking him out of the game in the fourth quarter, but it was Stanford that knocked Oregon out of the Top 25 with an 18-17 upset win.
