

Northeast

Continued from page 17

Pitt Panthers.

Harvard U. at Yale U., Nov. 18 — Harvard and Yale met first in 1875 and Yale leads the series by 17 games. As one might expect with Ivy League schools, there's not much in the way of pranks or tomfoolery, but Yale Assistant Sports Publicity Director Steve Conn remembers rumors of Harvard students stealing Yale's bulldog.

The students allegedly covered the John Harvard statue with ground meat and snapped photos of the bulldog seemingly kissing the meat-covered feet of the statue.

The real tradition with Harvard-Yale is tailgating, Conn said. Extravagance, candelabras and catered tailgating is the norm. "You wouldn't believe some of things the people do," he said.

Pennsylvania State U. at U. of Maryland, in Baltimore Nov. 11 — They even sell Penn State alumni license plates in Maryland, so the rivalry between alumni heats up at the Pennsylvania-Maryland border. The rivalry is intense because of interstate relations. "Lots of people commute back and forth to work or have relatives in the other state," said a spokesperson for Maryland sports information. "I'd say half the people here have something to do with Pennsylvania."

Fraternity

Continued from page 1

think it gives them a sense that they're important."

That's a foreign feeling for most children at St. Teresa's. "The majority have been physically and sexually abused," says Supervisor Bill Walker. "They're here to get therapy and work on daily living skills."

The Omegas also work with Toys for Tots and the United Negro College Fund, and they've unofficially adopted a woman and young child who were living in a rough Dallas neighborhood.

Former President Tyrone Miller says doing an occasional fund-raiser isn't enough.

"You haven't put a spot of butter on the bread. What we value is our time. They appreciate it more than putting $5 in their pocket."

Equity

Continued from page 16

school and college athletics will discuss women's sports issues.

"I've always believed it would take legislation" to increase the importance of women's collegiate sports, said U. of Washington junior Dawn Findlay.

Findlay is a member of the women's soccer club — for the past few years the club has petitioned unsuccessfully to become a varsity team. "I'm really amazed this bill passed," she said.

The new laws were prompted by a sex discrimination lawsuit brought against Washington State U.

The state Supreme Court ruled that WSU must provide equal opportunity and support for women's sports and that those calculations must include men's football.

Kathryn Reith, communications director of the Women's Sports Foundation in New York, is optimistic about the new laws.

"That kind of effect is going to make a difference," she said.

West

Continued from page 17

Cal player who scored knocked down a Stanford trombone player.

Perhaps the most interesting story of the rivalry involves the Stanford Axe. According to an article in The Stanford Daily a few years ago, the Axe originally was forged as a mascot for Stanford in March 1899, but was stolen by California students a month later. Thirty-one years later, a group of Stanford students, known as the "Immortal 21," stole the Axe back in an elaborate plan that included a home-made tear-gas bomb.

Today, the Axe serves as a trophy — with the score of each game engraved on it — for the winner of each year's game.

U. of Texas at Texas A&M U., Dec. 2 — The Texas A&M U.—U. of Texas rivalry dates back to 1894. A&M actually didn't score until the eighth game of the series, when the Aggies shutout Texas, 12-0.

In 1919, Aggie fans, still rejoicing in a 13-0 win in the previous game against the Texas Longhorns, branded the score on the Texas mascot.

U. of Oklahoma vs. U. of Texas, at Dallas Oct. 16 — "Texas-OU" weekend is an event looked forward to each year by the students, alumni, faculty and, of course, players from both schools.

Few games evoke as much pride as the annual battle in Dallas' Cotton Bowl. The Texas Longhorns hold an overall 47-32-4 advantage, but have not won since 1983. Since 1984, the Sooners have outscored Texas 133-41.

■ Jamie Aron, The Daily Texan, U. of Texas, Austin; Jeffrey Bechthold, The Daily Trojan, U. of Southern California; Chris Crader, The Stanford Daily, Stanford U.; and Tom Kehoe, The Battalion, Texas A&M U. contributed to this report.

Midwest

Continued from page 17

State U. was on a winning streak, Wildcat fans — hoping for a Big Eight Championship and a trip to the Orange Bowl — threw oranges at U. of Kansas band members.

U. of Notre Dame 24, U. of Michigan 19 — The battle for early season No. 1 this year was waged between rivals Michigan and U. of Notre Dame on Sept. 16.

The rivalry is big because both are traditional powers and the schools are relatively close to each other. "There's more support because it's so close," Notre Dame senior Elizabeth Sherowski said.

Sherowski and about 2,000 other Notre Dame students traveled to Ann Arbor to see the game. After the three-and-one-half hour drive, many students waited for tickets in the rain.

RESERVE OFFICERS' TRAINING CORPS

CASH IN ON GOOD GRADES.

If you're a freshman or sophomore with good grades, apply now for a three-year or two-year scholarship. From Army ROTC.

Army ROTC scholarships pay tuition, most books and fees, plus $100 per school month. They also pay off with leadership experience and officer credentials impressive to future employers.

To apply, contact the Professor of Military Science at your campus or one nearby.

ARMY ROTC

THE SMARTEST COLLEGE COURSE YOU CAN TAKE.