one from city councilors to the average person in the street can be frustrating. Learning to work with public feedback is a crucial part of an architect's education, Givens said.

"Designing in context is important," he said. "We can't avoid public input. It's bound to make our designs more inclusive."

Although the design competition focuses on the Schaefers Building, merchants and property owners throughout the downtown area stand to benefit from the students' work in the studio.

The book of design precepts compiled by students at the beginning of the term, Principles of Public Places, is available at Campus Copy Center to anyone, including downtown business owners who are looking for ideas to improve their buildings.

"(The design principles) are not just a prescription for change," Givens said. "They require interpretation, and anything that requires interpretation leads to creativity."

Walwyn agreed that individual business and property owners should take the initiative to get out of the economic slump downtown has been in for years.

"We've got to make it possible for our tenants to be successful," she said.

filming scenes both inside and outside of the Knight Library and at Nelson's mother's home in the Jasper area.

According to Kathy Wittwer, a library accounting clerk and friend of Nelson, "Missing/Reward" was the first program to contact Nelson's family after her sister, Pamela Kuhnenn, wrote to several programs.

The episode will appear on Eugene's KMTR Channel 16 on Sunday at 4:30 p.m. and again on cable's KPTV Channel 12 out of Portland at 10 p.m. that evening.

The production company filmed scenes on the University the first day. Included in the filming was an interview with Wittwer and a scene in which Nelson confronted her husband after she allegedly caught him sabotaging her motorcycle.

In the scene actor J.R. Knotts plays Nelson's husband Phil, and Suzanne Conrad plays Christine.

Shortly after the disappearance, Knight Library employees Mary Stoval and Wittwer set up a reward that with the help of family and friends has grown to $5,000.

The search for Nelson initially started as a search for someone who may have been in an accident with her motorcycle, said Horn. With time, the search broadened with the help of local radio stations, as well as co-workers from the University who made and distributed fliers.

The public has been supportive according to Horn.

"We just want to know if she's OK," she said.
