

A watchful eye

Fouad Algharabli, a graduate student in architecture, enjoys the calm before the next rainstorm while airing out his dorm room, a disadvantage to first-floor residents like himself who have to hang around for security purposes.

Census Continued from Page 1

By law, employees are forbidden to release or permit access to an individual's form to anyone else or any organization, including "the FBI, the Immigration Service or the president," Rupp said. Violation of this law is punishable by a fine or imprisonment.

An individual's census information is held confidential for 72 years. Information from the 1990 census would become available in 2062.

DRINKING AND DRIVING CAN KILL A FRIENDSHIP

Womenspace needs volunteers

By Denise Clifton
Emerald Associate Editor

If students are looking for meaningful work experiences outside the University and are concerned with domestic violence issues, they may be interested in becoming volunteers at a Eugene shelter for battered women and their children.

Womenspace, a non-profit agency which provides emergency shelter and support services for abused women and their children, is planning a new orientation and training session for volunteers beginning Jan. 13.

"We're looking for people who will commit six months to the shelter and work one shift — two to four hours — each week," said Womenspace volunteer coordinator Pearl Wolfe.

Openings are available for social service advocates, children's workers, crisis intervention and hotline workers, and residential program volunteers.

"Volunteers first go through the two eight-hour training sessions, which are an overview of the domestic violence movement and a review of the center and all its services," Wolfe said.

All necessary training is provided by Womenspace, and students are encouraged to sign up for the volunteer positions, Wolfe said. In the past students have used volunteer work at Womenspace for ESCAPE credits or women's studies practicums, she added.

"Doing work at a shelter like Womenspace is also a way to have a connection with what's going on in the world outside the University and to make a contribution," Wolfe said. "For people who want more than a classroom experience, it's really a wonderful education."

Womenspace volunteers provide 75 percent of the agency's direct services for women and children who are fleeing violence in their homes. During 1988 the center provided shelter to more than 500 women and their children, and Womenspace responded to more than 6,000 calls on its 24-hour crisis line.

If students are interested in becoming Womenspace volunteers, they can call the center at 485-8232 through Friday to reserve space in Saturday's training session.
