Semeniuk's consistency keeps team on top
Skill is key to her success

By Cam Sivesind
Emerald Sports Reporter

Senior Jacquie Semeniuk may not be a Bo Jackson, but when it comes to being versatile on the basketball floor, she is the next best thing.

Semeniuk has played every position possible in her four-year stint with the Oregon women's basketball team, from point guard to power forward to the post.

If there is a spot to be filled, Semeniuk is the person for the job and she'll do it well.

The Canadian native out of Kelowna, British Columbia, stepped into the point guard role last year and commanded the Ducks to the NWIT title.

"Last year, she led us at the point guard to an NWIT championship," Oregon coach Elwin Heiny said. "She clearly was a factor in any game. Teams pressed us, teams did all types of things and she had to control it."

The 5-foot-10 guard/forward (or post) is thankful for the opportunity she was given to come to Oregon.

"Coming from Canada, I was just planning to go to a Canadian university," Semeniuk said. "I wasn't highly recruited. There were just a couple of schools in the states that recruited me when we made it to our provincial tournament."

Oregon was smart enough to be one of those schools.

"My recruiting visit, I really had a good time and I really liked the people down here a lot," Semeniuk said. "It's kind of a dream I've had. A lot of Canadian athletes do have the same dream of going and playing in the United States."

The full-ride scholarship was an attractive feature as well, but more so for Semeniuk than your average American athlete. There are no Canadian athletic scholarships, so Semeniuk was more than happy to get the chance she did.

"I guess my situation is different from a lot of athletes here. Everything that I've been given here I just consider an incredible opportunity," Semeniuk said. "Maybe it's taken for granted a lot more
