

Each hall offers the benefits of a game room and a large screen television. Vending machines curb hunger attacks and pianos in the lounges offer diversion for the musically inclined.

The area desks in Carson and Hamilton complexes present possibilities for entertainment just for the asking. At area desks, residents can borrow board games, video cassette recorders and, for late-night mud football, sports equipment. All that's needed is a few people and perhaps a movie.

Events around the dormitories, including lectures, workshops, movie marathons, mocktails parties and java jives are all coordinated by the program assistants. Program assistant Cathy Johnson said, "These events are open to all students, even though the funds come out of the residents' social fee."

Dormitory events are advertised in the dormitory halls and lounges and usually have a minimal door fee.

In addition, theaters around campus can help alleviate the boredom of an evening on-campus. Robinson Theatre and University Theatre, both located in Villard Hall, offer upcoming plays and a dance performance. Music Hall, at the other end of campus, offers a new term of concerts and performances. Schedules can be found at the theaters and the School of Music.

If all this fails to strike the interest of you and your friends some evening, there are always two standbys. Visiting other friends on-campus and off-campus is a fun way to spend an entertaining evening, and of course, there is always one way to be really productive — do your homework.

Ken Kesey and the members of his Creative Writing class have accomplished something that has never been done before in the annals of academia. They have written a book together and it has been published.

CAVERNS is a rollicking tale which takes the reader from the streets of San Francisco to the desert mountains of Utah to the steps of the Mormon Tabernacle in Salt Lake City. It is destined to become a cult classic.
