Circle K promotes service goals

By Jolie Andrade
Emerald Reporter

Circle K International is a unique college organization that strives to make the world better by promoting service, leadership and friendship.

"The main objective of Circle K is to serve the college campus and the community," said Lisa Lawrence, one of Circle K's lieutenant governors.

"We're trying to make tomorrow and the short-term future better for our community," said Keith Mackay, University Circle K president.

University Circle K's 14 members have done more than 1,000 hours of community service since September, Mackay said.

Once a month Circle K visits Redwood

Villa, a nursing home for mentally limited adults in Eugene.

Two weeks ago, while hosting their district conference, Circle K district members took 30 children from the University Big Brother/Big Sister Program bowling at the EMU recreation center.

During their weekend conference they also conducted a local food and clothing drive, donating all the proceeds to Goodwill and local Eugene food banks, Mackay said.

Circle K is participating in Aids Information Month by working at information tables.

Activities generated by Circle K promotes leadership and friendship as well as service.

Another positive aspect of Circle K is that there are no requirements to be a member, Mackay said.

Circle K is sponsored by Kiwanis International and consists of 30 districts world-wide.
