

Children

Continued from page 1

Harger's day usually begins at 6 a.m. and ends at about 1 or 2 a.m., he said.

"I do OK. I think I'm a good father. I'd get married and divorced again just so I could have Dene." Harger said money is the biggest problem he faces on a regular basis.

"I'm broke now. I'm always broke," he said. "I have just enough money to get tuition and the rent paid."

Harger said dating has been a problem because he is always up front with women about his daughter. "They usually don't want to have anything to do with me, and I don't blame them," he said.

Senior Jana Gregory is also a single parent. Gregory, 21, married her freshman year, had her son the summer before her sophomore year and was divorced her junior year. She now shares custody of her two-year-old son, Ryan, and does her part to raise him while attending school.

Gregory, who is majoring in business communications, has been able to maintain a 3.5 GPA since she had her son. She has received several academic scholarships and a Pell grant, which help her finance her education and living expenses.

Gregory said many people stereotype college students with children as being destitute. "They just don't think I look like a mother," she said. "I just ask them, 'What does a mother look like?'"

Although parenthood has eliminated some academic and social opportunities she has few regrets. "If I had it to do it all over again, I'd wait to get married. But I wouldn't trade Ryan for anything."

KELLI SMITH, UNIVERSITY DAILY KANSAN, U. OF KANSAS

U. of Kansas senior Jana Gregory plays with her son Ryan in their front yard.

Prayer

Continued from page 1

The ruling stems from a successful suit filed in 1986 by a Georgia high school student who opposed pre-game prayer. After a series of court rulings declaring the prayer unconstitutional, the U.S. Supreme Court declined to review the case and let the decision go into effect in January 1989.

The U. of Georgia briefly defied the court when UGA President Charles Knapp allowed prayer to be broadcast at the university's season-opening football game, asserting that the ruling only applied to high schools.

"We are going to go ahead with the prayer," Knapp said before the game. "It has become a tradition that is important to the fans."

Knapp quickly backed down after the Georgia state attorney general notified him that the ACLU was preparing a lawsuit, and the university would lose a court battle over the issue.

Georgia was the only one of four affected Southeastern Conference schools to broadcast prayer at the time of the ruling. The U. of Florida and Auburn U. discontinued the prayers this year, and Alabama has not broadcast a pre-game prayer in the last three years.

Neal Callahan of the Red and Black, U. of Georgia contributed to this report.

Crime

Continued from page 2

violent crime that year, the fewest for an institution with at least 20,000 students.

However, only 262 colleges and universities nationwide contributed data for the FBI's annual campus crime report.

"You have to consider that probably 10 percent of all colleges contribute," said Kris Waskaiewicz, an FBI crime report writer.

"You can't make a comparison between colleges. We discourage anything like that."

A correction in New Mexico's data would leave the U. of Medicine and Dentistry in Newark, N.J. at No. 1 in violent crime with 51.

The remaining four most violent campuses, according to the report, are the U. of California, Berkeley with 50 reports of violent crime, Michigan State U. with 46 and Northeastern U. of Massachusetts and the U. of Washington tied with 37.

START YOUR CLIMB TO CAREER SUCCESS THIS SUMMER.

Apply now for six weeks of Army ROTC leadership training. With pay, without obligation.

You'll develop the discipline, confidence, and decisiveness it takes to succeed in any career. And you'll qualify to earn Army officer credentials while you're completing your college studies.

For details, contact the Professor of Military Science at your campus or one nearby.

ARMY ROTC

THE SMARTEST COLLEGE COURSE YOU CAN TAKE.