Pro-enforcement

However, not all communities experiencing student-police tensions are so eager to spend time talking; some just want action.

Gregg Lobisser, University associate dean of students, recently returned from a conference of the National Association of Student Personnel Administrators where he attended a seminar on university-community relations at the University of Delaware, Newark.

Lobisser said that Newark had experienced many community relations problems because the student population is close to the size of the city's.

To relieve mounting tensions, the university and community agreed on a pro-enforcement stance. The city passed ordinances broadening the definition of noise and ordering landlords to evict tenants with more than two noise violations.

Moreover, the University of Delaware, Newark, decided to suspend students with more than three noise or consumption misdemeanors and to expel any student with three felonies or more than four misdemeanors.

Lobisser said the school's officials provided evidence that their policies are legal. "They cited a couple of cases that went to the Supreme Court," he said. "It found that there is no double jeopardy" in subjecting students to both civic and academic penalties.

But Lobisser said students shouldn't worry that such policies would be adopted in Eugene.

"I can't imagine this institution and this city would do that," he said. "And I can't imagine this program would be right for our student body."

ACHING FOR LOVE THE SEXUAL DRAMA OF THE ADULT CHILD

By Mary Ann Klausner and Bobbie Hasselbring

ACHING FOR LOVE is the first book to explore fully the problems of sexuality and intimacy faced by adult children of alcoholics—straight or gay.

"If you're an adult child of an alcoholic, chances are you're unhappy with your sex, with your life, with your relationship partner, and/or with yourself," write the authors. Based on research with over 100 women who grew up in alcoholic families, Aching for Love focuses on the sexual problems that often face adult children.

Mary Ann Klausner, an expert in sexuality and substance abuse, lives in Eugene, OR. She is an adjunct faculty member at the California Family Study Center in Burbank, CA. Bobbie Hasselbring, who lives in Beavercreek, OR, is the author of The Medical Self-Care Book Of Women's Health and other books. She writes for MS, Women's Sports and Fitness.

ONLY MARY ANN KLAUSNER WILL BE PRESENT AT THE BOOKSIGNING.
