Bills wants better ties on budgets

Brings GALA, USSA insight

By Alice Thornton
 Emerald Reporter

Incidental Fee Committee candidate Jennifer Bills says she would like to reduce misunderstandings about budgets by establishing stronger communication between the IFC and student groups.

The third-year English major dealt with IFC budgets last year during her term as program director of the Gay and Lesbian Alliance. She said she helped operate the group within GALA's annual budget and created the budget for the following year.

Bills, who is running for a one-year seat, has also worked with a $300,000 budget during her current participation on the board of directors for the United States Student Association. She also serves as the chair of the Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Caucus for USSA.

Through her USSA experience, Bills has dealt with child care problems and gay and lesbian issues. She said this experience has given her perspective on current campus issues.

"I feel I'm the voice for the unspoken minority," Bills said. "I definitely have a different perspective."

Fundraising is the key to maintaining the IFC budget, Bills said, adding that student groups can help themselves by finding outside revenue sources.

"I encourage subsidies from outside sources," Bills said. "As a fee-paying student, I don't want to pay more fees than I have to."

Bills said students should have as much control over their fees as possible. She would also like students to be able to participate in the distribution of money from the athletic department.

"I think student groups don't understand IFC," Bills said. "IFC needs to do its part by talking to groups and getting groups to work together. We need to understand that some students are inexperienced at budgeting."

"The athletic department has a $100,000 slush fund," Bills said. "Students pay for it, but they have no say in what's done with it. IFC needs to look seriously at what's going on."

A current problem with the IFC is that student groups do not understand the budgeting process, Bills said. She proposed more contact between IFC members and student groups as a way of solving budgetary misunderstandings.

Bills said she would like the IFC to continue to look at the diversity of the various student organizations. Regardless of how IFC members feel about certain groups, she said they all serve the purpose of a particular group of students.

"IFC can continue to benefit the cultural, spiritual needs of the student body," Bills said.

Student injured in collision

An accident on campus Tuesday involving two bicycles sent one University student to the Student Health Center to receive treatment for head injuries.

Josh Burt suffered cuts to his head and his face, just above his eye, when his bicycle collided with another and he landed on his head after being thrown over the handle bars.

Burt was taken to the health center for observation and to get stitches for his cuts, said paramedic Barry Floyd.

Burt was not wearing a helmet. The accident occurred on 13th Avenue in front of Johnson Hall slightly before 11 a.m.

A witness at the scene said Burt failed to see a bicycle that was pulling up to a bike rack and clipped the bicycle's back tire. Witness Bryan Farris said Burt was not going excessively fast at the time of the accident.

"He wasn't puddling along. But he wasn't talking to anyone or just be-bopping along not paying attention either," Farris said.

Kelly Patrick, the rider of the other bicycle involved said she was pulling up to the bike rack when her bicycle was struck from behind.

"It was a pretty hard collision," she said.
