Oregon players make All-Pac-10 tennis team

Three Oregon women's tennis players and one member of the men's team were named to the all-Pacific-10 Conference team Tuesday. Commissioner Thomas Hansen announced.

Senior Kumi Nagamoto, Oregon women's top singles player, was named as the third pick on the team, behind Player of the Year Cindy Olejar and Mary Reilly, both of Washington.

Nagamoto finished the season with a 14-14 singles record as the Ducks' top singles player during the 1990 season. She also established a school record for career victories with 61.

Senior Amber Goheen was the fifth pick after finishing with a 17-12 singles record and teaming with Nagamoto for an 11-11 mark in doubles play.

Junior Hillary Roberts was chosen for the sixth position on the team. Roberts spent most of the season playing in the Ducks' second singles spot and compiled a 16-11 record.

Roberts also teamed with Shelley Brandt in Oregon's second singles position to take a 16-8 record on the season.

Olejar, a junior, was 19-10 this year and won the Northern Division championship in singles.

On the men's side, Oregon's Kevin Cory was the Ducks' lone selection at fourth. Cory had a singles record of 15-15 on the year and finished his career with 42 wins, good for sixth place on Oregon's all-time list.

Washington's Aaron Gross was picked as the Northern Division player of the year in the conference. Gross, who won the Northern Division championship, had a 16-8 singles record on the year.

Washington dominated the all-Conference Northern Division teams with seven players chosen for a total of 12 positions. Four Husky men and three women were chosen. Washington State's Art Lambert was the only selection for the Cougars.

Washington's Doug Ruffin was picked men's coach of the year and Lisa Moldrem the women's.
