Rally today for nuke-free zone cause

University students will join with faculty and Eugene residents at a rally on behalf of the Nuclear Free Zone Amendment Thursday at noon in the EMU Courtyard.

Speakers from the University include Brian Hoop of the Survival Center, Shannon Oliver of Student Campaign for Disarmament, and Professor Aaron Novick.

Novick, head of the Institute of Molecular Biology, helped build the first atomic bomb as a member of the Manhattan Project in 1945. Novick is a leading spokesman in the scientific community against the arms race.

Speakers from the community include Richard Green, owner of Rainbow Optics; Catherine Harris, owner of Perlandra Books; and Olive Bowers, international peace activist.

Eugene voters will cast a vote on the Nuclear Free Zone during the May 15 elections. It will be the third time since 1986 that the issue has come to a vote. Two previous measures passed by city-wide vote were revoked or changed by the city council.
