Encore!

Blues concert slated for Saturday

By Kelvin Wee
Encore Editor

The University's Campus Community Task Force and the EMU Cultural Forum will co-sponsor An Evening of Rhythm and Blues in the field west of Hayward Field Saturday night.

The concert will feature three popular Oregon blues bands — The Lloyd Jones Struggle, Barbara Healey and the All Nighterz, and Curtis Salgado and the Stilettoes.

Task Force Co-chairman and University Vice Provost for Student Affairs Gerard Moseley said the idea for such a large concert came from the task force when it discovered such events would be an alternative for students who wanted to party.

"We wanted to have an event that was large enough to accommodate the students," he said.

Moseley said this concert is a trial program, one that he hopes will start a tradition at the University. But concert and set-up costs mounting to about $12,000 will only allow for continuation of such programs if students turn up.

ASUO President-elect Kirk Bailey, who also is co-chairman of the task force, said he supported this event because it offered great music and a great alternative for students.

"It provides a draw to all students be they of age or not," he said. "It's held in a central location so that all can come to it."

Bailey said the event will help build unity among students and that the ASUO has and will continue to support such programs. "Our office would be looking at events providing community and unity around students," Bailey said.

While much of the money to host this concert is coming from the University, the planning and organizing is being done by the EMU Cultural Forum.

"The Cultural Forum has done a great job planning and putting it together," Bailey said.

Moseley agreed, adding that they had only two to three weeks to plan for this event.

Tickets for the concert are being sold at the EMU Main Desk for $3. Audiences are invited to bring picnic baskets and their own non-alcoholic beverages and food. There is one main rule — no glass containers will be allowed.

Because the event is being planned to be held outdoors, an alternative site has been reserved in case of bad weather. The concert will be moved to the EMU Ballroom should it rain.

Doors open at 6 p.m. and partying will begin promptly at 8 p.m.

Marie Landreth, soprano, will be performing in Carmina Burana at the University School of Music May 16-17.
