

The Eugene Peace Choir, shown above, feels that "in harmony, we can heal the planet."

Group hopes to spread good will through the strength of its music

The Eugene Peace Choir was started up in 1984 by several friends who wanted to incorporate new songs and vitality into political causes and rallies.

The choir has grown to include 30 women and men, the director of which is Wanda Walker. The group has performed at many events including benefits, festivals, rallies and annually at the Hiroshima Nagasaki commemoration. They also sang at the first annual banquet of the World Peace University.

The group's repertoire includes folk, ethnic and rock music. They perform songs written by Sweet Honey in the Rock, Jackson Browne, Holly Near and others, as well as songs written by the director and choir members.

The main purpose of the Eugene Peace Choir, they said, is to bring a message of peace and empowerment through music.
