

Four track athletes gain NCAA berths

Four Oregon track athletes on the NCAA provisional list became NCAA qualifiers Saturday night when the NCAA selection committee announced its field for the NCAA meet.

On the men's side Tye Van Schoiack (3,000-meter steeplechase) and Pat Haller (10,000 meters) joined Oregon's list that already included 12 automatic qualifiers for the four-day meet which will be held on the campus of Duke University in Durham, N.C. starting Wednesday.

For the women, sprinter Rosie Williams was added to the NCAA field in the 200 meters as was discus thrower Stephanie Smith to give the women six qualifiers.

Van Schoiack was added to the list after turning in a personal record 8:45.33 at the Ralph Hill Open last Wednesday at Hayward Field. Van Haller spent most of his season running the 5,000 meters, but he did run the 10,000 in 29:08.69 at the Oregon Preview in March, just 69-hundredths off the automatic standard of 29:08.00.

Oregon now has four runners in the 10,000 for the NCAA meet as Peter Fonseca, Brad Hudson and Terrance Mahon had already qualified.

Despite a hamstring injury which limited much of her competition this season, Williams returned to full strength at the Pacific-10 Conference meet where she finished third in both the 100 and 200.

Tye Van Schoiack's time (8:45.33) in the 3,000-meter steeplechase was good enough for the Pac-10's sixth place finisher to qualify for the NCAA track meet.
