Graduation '90

Quotes Continued from Page 16B

instant two like-minded individuals build something for someone else, address a grievance, take a risk. The best thing you can give yourself is the gift of possibility and believing in the possibility of others."

Paul Newman, actor, speaking at Sarah Lawrence College, 1990

• "One question that I can answer is the question: Is there a man shortage? There is not a man shortage. There is actually a man excess. Look at the House of Representatives. Look at the Senate. Look at the tenured faculty at any American college. And you will see an appalling man excess, which means a woman shortage. So for all the young women graduating today, I want to say you have your work cut out for you."

Barbara Ehrenreich, feminist, speaking at Reed College, 1987

• "Imagine what we could be if we could realize the full potential of all our people, if we could reaffirm the notion of family and reject—as we always have at our best—the proposition that we can exist and thrive as a house divided or a world divided, fractionalized by sex or nationality, by race or color or religion."

• "An incompetent teacher is even worse than an incompetent surgeon because a surgeon can only cut up one person at a time."

Ernest Boyer, president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, speaking at Trinity University, 1988

• "Sometimes we need to fuse our lives again with those people who seem at times to be antagonists—you young men especially, because it is hard for us men to profess our love. It is quite often very difficult for you fathers and for you. So for you young men, when the ceremony is over, I want you to run over to the old man. Grab him, hug him and kiss him and say, 'Dad, I love you and I thank you for all the years.' That's part of the ceremony. I demand that of you when this is all over. It will save you a lot of trouble getting to know your father 10 years from now."

Ray Bradbury, science fiction

writer, speaking at Harvey Mudd College, 1987

• "When women graduated 20 years ago, they didn't think about careers. When women graduated 10 years ago, they only thought about careers. All of us learned we have to combine careers and family. You can do it all. You just don't sleep very much."

Cokie Roberts, journalist, speaking at Bryn Mawr College, 1990

• "What I want to tell you today is not to move into that world where you're alone with your self and your mantra and your fitness program or whatever it is that you might use to try to control the world by closing it out. I want to tell you to just live in the mess. Throw yourself out into the convulsions of the world. I'm not telling you to make the world better, because I don't believe progress is necessarily part of the package. I'm just telling you to live in it, to look at it, to witness it. Try and get it. Take chances. Make your own work, take pride in it. Seize the moment."

Joan Didion, author, speaking at Bard College, 1987
