SHELTER

Barnes, a single mother who had lived at the shelter until she was evicted and later arrested. "We're staying. We have nowhere else to go. We do need to make a statement to the community about homelessness because it's knocking on the middle class' door right now."

Jim Johnson, county administrator, said the group had printed flyers, inviting other homeless people to join them on the shelter's lawn.

Earlier in the week, someone donated a portable toilet to the campers, but with no running water and an unknown number of people arriving at the shelter, Johnson said the county was worried about sanitation at the site.

"We didn't know how far it would go," Johnson said. "We decided it would be best to stop it at that point."

Also, because the lease with the Eugene School District expires Saturday, Johnson said the county wanted to return the property in the same condition in which it had been leased.

Johnson said the county refused to take blame for the plight of those evicted from the shelter and for those who were arrested, insisting the county had done what it could to ease the plight of the homeless in the area.

"(Homelessness) has occupied the county's attention to a large extent," Johnson said, citing the $680,000 a year the county spends on the problem in addition to the $750,000 it allocated in April. "The reality is that local government cannot solve all of the problems in our area."

Expanding your choice of power.

Announcing the Macintosh IIx.

Now you have more ways to exercise your power of choice. Because we just expanded your choice of powerful Macintosh® computers.

Introducing the Macintosh IIx. At 40 megahertz, it's the fastest Macintosh ever. Its amazing speed makes every Macintosh application work more quickly and efficiently. Which makes productivity soar to new levels.

What's more, its remarkable power and enhanced responsiveness open the door to an entire new world of sophisticated applications. Like CAD, CAE, or real-time animation. And with six NuBus® slots, you have plenty of room for expansion.

Of course, all modular Macintosh computer systems are designed to grow along with your needs—from the flexible Macintosh IIfx, to the versatile Macintosh IIx, to the mighty Macintosh IIcx. So you can start with the level of power you need now. And add extra memory, peripherals, and communications cards as you need them.

However, one thing comes standard with every Macintosh: the legendary Macintosh ease of use. Just point and click, and you'll take full advantage of thousands of Macintosh applications. That all work in the same, graphically intuitive way.

Exercise your power of choice today. Stop by and ask for a demonstration. Special pricing for U of O students, faculty and staff.
