

INSIDE

WHILE YOU WERE AWAY-

Student health insurance contracts were negotiated, and a student animal rights group asked the district attorney's office to investigate a University research project. Find out what else happened during the summer.

STUDENT-RUN RADIO-

KRMA, a new student-run radio station, should be on the air by this winter, provided they receive their long-awaited FCC license.

SERVICES-

A sprained ankle, a fruitless search for an apartment, or a dispute with a professor can interrupt students' carefully laid plans. However, services are available to help students cope. DDDDDDDDDDDDDDD

DORM LIFE-

Dorm residents are stuck with dorm food, but they can make the rest of their lives pleasant by following the advice of

CO-PRESIDENTS-

ASUO co-Presidents Kirk Bailey and Sheila Stickel have spent the summer negotiating contracts, building a rapport with University administrators and planning their strategy to improve higher education funding.

INTERNATIONAL APPEAL-

International students are attracted to the University because of its academic reputation and because of Oregon's natural beauty. In return, they give local residents a glimpse into life in their own countries.
