Micro-breweries popular in Eugene

By Andrew Martinson
Emerald Contributor

College and cheap beer are no longer synonymous. Those of you who look at a can of Old Milwaukee and believe it does get better than this are right.

Offering a variety of locally-made beers and ales, Oregon Micro-breweries are enjoying a growing popularity. And the University area is no stranger to their existence.

Micro-breweries, according to Oregon licensing law, have a limit of 25,000 barrels a year, each barrel holding 31 gallons. With their Public
