high."

The one thing Burwell definitely has over Loville is explosive breakaway speed.

Several times against BYU Burwell got outside on sweeps and turned the corner for long gains. He can also stop and cut on a dime as he demonstrated against the Cougars as well.

"That's probably the one thing he does possess that Derek Loville didn't have," Brooks said. "is a little bit better breakaway speed."

Brooks and Campbell like Burwell's abilities as a receiver almost as much as his lightning-like speed.

His one touchdown reception came against BYU when he lined up as one of three outside receivers in a three receiver set and came over the middle to catch a 31-yard scoring strike from Musgrave.

Burwell's abilities as a receiver evoke the comparisons with Loville again.

Loville caught 92 passes in his career to rank 10th on the all-time school list for receptions. Both Brooks and Campbell think Burwell can be an even better receiver, however, based on what he's already done this season.

"They're both very close as receivers," Campbell said, "but Sean may be a little bit of a better receiver. Obviously last Saturday he showed he can make the deep play and can handle that assignment."

"Loville was a tremendous receiver as well but I think Burwell is really talented in that area," Brooks added.

Burwell has shown he is talented in a lot of areas and before his career at Oregon is over he may prove to be more talented than Loville.

zone on a regular basis."

While the Ducks will be trying to stop Grant and Lopez, they also will be far from full strength with several players battling injuries and the flu bug that has hit the team this week.

Fullback Juan Shedrick is still bothered by a bad ankle and likely won't start. Brooks is looking at starting back-up tailback Ngalu Kelemani at fullback in Shedrick's place. Brooks did say that Shedrick could possibly play Saturday.

The offensive line is also banged up. Bud Bowie, who has started all four games at right guard, will likely miss the Utah State game with a neck injury. He will be replaced by Andy Sunia who has battled back from a knee injury suffered in the San Diego State game.

Centers Scot Boatright and Collin Hall also are banged up this week and if they can't go, back-up guard Greg Phillips might have to move back to center.

"We're not what I would consider a real healthy team right now," Brooks said. "We certainly do have a lot of bruised and battered bodies right now."

Record Update: Quarterback Bill Musgrave needed 152 yards passing last week to overtake Chris Miller for the most career passing yards in school history. Musgrave got that with room to spare by completing 23 of 37 passes for 286 yards. This week Musgrave needs 152 yards of total offense to surpass Miller's career total offense record of 6,841 yards.
