

LOW-KEY

Two years ago, Edmunson won a heated race against Republican challenger Dennis Brodigan. But this year, with almost a month left before the Nov. 6 election, it looks as if it is going to be a more tepid run for District 39, which includes West Eugene and the Santa Clara area.

Edmunson said he views this year's race as a "much lower-key campaign."

"I'm going to recycle my lawn signs from the last campaign," Edmunson said. "I'd be surprised if (to date) I'd spent $ 5,000."

While both Fauvre and Edmunson take pro-abortion stances and have said they oppose Measures 8 and 10 on the November ballot, Measure 11 brings the candidates' differences to the fore.

The measure would give parents a $ 2,500-per-student tax break for sending their children to private schools, and it would establish an open enrollment policy among Oregon's school districts.

Edmunson is opposed to the idea because he says it would violate the separation of church and state. He also believes the measure is irresponsible. It would "create a class structure like we've never seen before," he said, adding it's a "recipe for an educational ghetto."

However, Fauvre is in favor of the measure, believing it will improve the quality of education in the state by giving people the choice of where to school their children.

"Public schools have a monopoly," Fauvre said, adding that he does not believe the measure will contradict the separation of church and state.

Two years ago, Edmunson's race against Republican Dennis Brodigan was not as relaxed as this year's. The 1988 race was the most expensive in the Eugene-Springfield area.
