California had a lot to celebrate Saturday including three touchdowns in the first quarter and a possible Copper Bowl bid.

game of Wallace and White.

But the Duck offense never got in gear.

Oregon came in with the second-best offense in the Pac-10 while the Cal defense was the 10th-best in the conference, and with the high-powered Cal offense, it seemed both teams would be in for a high-scoring affair.

But Musgrave was inconsistent from the start after missing most of practice last week with a sore shoulder. Things went from bad to worse when he suffered a late-hit from Cal defensive tackle Rhett Hall in the first quarter after completing a pass to Anthony Jones.

Musgrave stayed in for three more series but left the game in the second quarter after Hall's hit aggravated the injury.

"I threw a pass to A.J. (Jones)," Musgrave said. "I thought I was in the clear and just relaxed."

"It was one of those hits that you take every game, but my shoulder just wasn't ready for that today," he said. "I was a little surprised by the hit."

Jon Okken came in to relieve Musgrave but was ineffective and had to be replaced by Bob Brothers.

Okken completed five of eight passes, but for only 21 yards and it was his fumble on a sack by Jason Wilborn and the recovery by Hall on the Oregon 32 that set up Cal's last touchdown in the third quarter.

Brothers had perhaps the best game of his career, completing 12 of 24 passes for 143 yards, but although he was able to lead the Ducks inside Cal territory several times, Oregon was never able to get the ball into the end zone.

"We did not generate any offense," Brooks said. "Cal deserved to win. They outplayed us. I don't know if we played well enough to beat Cal today, but we should have played well enough to be competitive."

There was some concern coming into the game that Oregon might not be emotionally ready after knowing it had already secured a bowl invitation. Brooks said he didn't know if that was the case or not, just that he didn't have any answers for the Ducks' performance.

"Whatever it was, I'm not very happy with it," he said. "We played very lethargic in the first quarter, but then we came back. But when they jump out to a 21-0 lead, they can pin their ears and come at you."

Oregon now has to regroup for Saturday's Civil War game with Oregon State, but might have to play without Musgrave. If he couldn't go, Brothers would appear to be the starter.

Brothers is 0-1 as a starter, but the Ducks are now 2-9 over the last four years in games Musgrave has either not started or finished, and the last time he missed a Civil War game, the Beavers won 21-10 in Corvallis.

Duck Notes: Tailback Sean Burwell carried 24 times for 124 yards and now has 934 yards for the season. He needs only 66 yards to top the 1,000-yard barrier and become only the second freshman in Pac-10 history to have a 1,000-yard season.

PILOT

"LCC has the best flight school in the Pacific Northwest, and is in the top 10 in the country."

Harrison said he wants to fly for the airlines someday, but that is "years down the road." For the present, he will continue to teach, racking up flight hours until he hits 500. Then, it's off to Haines, Alaska for air-taxi service in the spring.

Becoming a pilot is expensive. Harrison wouldn't say just how much money he's put into his flying career, but in comparison, a private pilot's license (45 to 55 flight hours) costs about $2,500. Harrison is well beyond that, with an instrument rating and a commercial instructor's license.

"A flight career is a full-time, lifetime commitment," he said. "There's something about the joy of flying. You just have to experience it."
