The Oregon volleyball team split its last two home matches at McArthur Court this weekend, defeating Washington State 15-9, 13-15, 13-15, 15-6, 15-8, but losing to Washington 12-15, 15-13, 10-15, 15-11, 15-12.

In Friday's match against the Cougars, the Ducks dominated the first game early as they scored the first six points but the Cougars came back to pull within 11-8 before Oregon pulled away and grabbed game one from the Cougars.

Neither team could take control of the second game early. Despite several Oregon rallies, Washington State regained the lead and stayed there to tie the match at one game apiece.

It was also neck-and-neck in the third game, as both teams exchanged leads early. It looked like the Ducks had the upper hand, leading 10-8 but Washington State came back to tie the game at 13-13, and won the game to take a 2-1 lead in the match.

The Ducks regrouped and easily beat the Cougars in the fourth game, tying the match and forcing a fifth game.

Both teams fought hard in the fifth game, and Washington State led 6-4 but the Ducks didn't die. They regained the lead and stomped the Cougars the rest of the way to win the match.

Oregon outside hitter Ali Watkins led both teams with 28 kills on the night, and outside hitter Julie Jeffery led the Ducks with 27. Kelly Hankins led the Cougars with 20 kills.

In Saturday night's match against Washington, the Huskies jumped to an early 7-4 lead in the first game. The Ducks made a big comeback and
