Comedy shows fun after midterms

Somewhere it must be written that comedy came about to ease the stressful minds of many a college student.

Anyone in the college marketplace knows that a week of midterms creates a demand for good times and laughs. Both the Black Angus Restaurant, 2123 Franklin Blvd., and Scandals Night Club, 2222 Centennial Blvd., found the comedy niche.

The Black Angus Restaurant can brag. "We have the longest running comedy show in Eugene," said Kevin Winnett, catering manager. "We've been hosting comedy for four years now."

Their show, which features two comedians chosen by a booking agent, takes the stage from 9-11 p.m. every Tuesday. A happy hour precedes the comedy from 8-9 p.m..

The weekly show is put on by The Black Angus and Magic 94, a Eugene radio station, and there is a $5 cover charge. Alan Craig, a Magic 94 disc jockey, emcees the show.

"Most of the comedians we get are pretty big names," Winnett said. "They've been on Showtime or toured on big circuits."

Because of this, they bring in good-sized crowds every week. "We have a lot of regulars," said Winnett. "We get some people from the college just down the street and we get a lot of people between the ages of 27 and 35."

"Laugh Line," the name of their comedy show, takes place just upstairs from the restau-
