Defense leads way in Civil War win

By Ashley Conklin

CORVALLIS — For two weeks people had asked Oregon defensive coordinator Denny Schuler what happened to his defense.

The Duck defense had given up 52 points in the last two games against UCLA and California, and had given up 21 points in the first quarter at Cal last week.

But after Saturday's Civil War game with Oregon State at Parker Stadium, Schuler's defense was again receiving praise following a dominating performance in a 6-3 win.

"Any time you hold a team without a touchdown it's got to be a great performance," Schuler said.

"Any time you hold a team to 17 points or less it's ideal," added nose tackle Marcus Woods, who had three tackles for lost yardage and a quarterback sack.

Oregon had to have another dominating performance from the defense in a game in which quarterback Bill Musgrave didn't play.

On top of that, the Ducks lost tailback Sean Burwell (bruised back) and wide receiver Joe Reitzug (reinjured knee) early in the game and had to rely on the defense with their top three offensive weapons on the sideline.

Gregg McCallum and the defense got the job done as McCallum booted two field goals, and the defense held the Beavers to only 27 rushing yards and 198 yards of total offense.

"I guess we just did about what was necessary to get the job done," Oregon Coach Rich Brooks said. "It wasn't pretty, but it's 8-3 (overall) and 4-3 in the league, and that hasn't been done in a long time."

With the win, Oregon finishes all alone in third place in the Pacific-10 Conference, and with eight regular season wins for the first time since 1959.
