Kojan wins Family Week award

By June Russell

Family Resources completed National Family Week with speeches and an informal award ceremony for Family Resources' poster contest Friday evening at Oakway Center.

Krista Kojan, a fifth grader at Crest Drive Elementary, won a framed copy of her drawing, "My Family Camping," and a family night out fun package for her and her family for her entry.

Some 150 children representing 10 Lane County schools entered the contest by also submitting drawings of their families.

In addition to Kojan, an Executive Director's award winner and three runners-up winners were chosen. The winners received posters, tee shirts and a variety of gift certificates. All entrants received a gift certificate for McDonald's.

"One of the things we wanted to do with the poster contest is to recognize that families are still here and working hard," said Mary Ellen Fisher, executive director of Family Resources.

The poster contest is the first held by Family Resources, but Fisher said it won't be the last. The winner's poster will become the agency's poster for the year.

Keynote speaker John Ball, Director of Youth Services for the State of Oregon, discussed the changing composition of families.

"What America has thought of the traditional family is no longer the reality," Ball said. "It's really incumbent on us in the 1990s to get our services modernized to serve people other than in the family unit."

"There are still a lot of barriers that hamper non-traditional families in our society," Ball added. "Those are real people living in real situations."

Fisher agreed with Ball's statements, and stressed that the change in composition of families from the traditional idea to the modern reality hasn't changed the nature or function of families.

"People see what they've thought of as a traditional family - where mom stays home to cook and clean and take care of the kids while dad works - which never really was," Fisher said.

"Families are still here. They're changing, but they still give the child all the love and support the child needs," she added. "They're just different."

The poster contest is one way Family Resources hopes to increase awareness of the role families play in the community and that non-traditional families do function to provide the support children and family members need.

Family Resources is a non-profit social service, a United Way agency, whose mission is to support families in Lane County. The agency has existed since 1967, serving approximately 9,000 families per year through its programs.

Muslim event-planning disputed

Two Muslim students are disputing the sponsorship of events planned for today and sponsored by the Muslim Student Association to commemorate the fourth year of the Palestinian uprising.

Fida Mohammed and Bader Harahsheh, both graduate students, said they represent 29 members of the Muslim Student Association who are contesting elections held earlier this term and who have had no part in organizing "Palestine Solidarity Day."

"The events may not necessarily represent the point of view of the majority of MSA," Mohammed said Monday.

Activities planned for today include video lectures, films and an eyewitness account by a man who spent the summer in Israeli-occupied Palestine.

Mohammed, a former president of the Muslim Student Association, said he and other members presented a petition to the ASUO last month saying officer elections held at the beginning of fall term were discriminatory and that several students were not allowed to vote or run for office.

No one from the Muslim association could be reached for comment late Monday.

ASUO co-President Kirk Bailey said he was aware of concerns brought to his office by Mohammed and Harahsheh and that Programs Coordinator Killjan Anderson was working with the group to resolve its conflicts.
