Oregon drops two games on East Coast trip

By Jake Berg

The Oregon women's basketball team found that two East Coast schools were not so giving over the holiday weekend, as the Ducks fell in a pair of games to open their season.

St. Joseph's greeted Oregon Friday night in Philadelphia with a 76-70 loss, the first time in five years that the Ducks fell in their regular season opener. The Hawks' eight three-point shots headlined their victory over the Ducks.

With 7:21 remaining in the contest and the score locked at 57-57, St. Joseph's guard Rita Balaban hit three of her game-high 17 points on a three-pointer that gave her team a lead it never relinquished.

Hawks' forward Wendy Brink followed Balaban's shot with a three of her own, which gave St. Joseph's a six-point lead.

Oregon opened the game with an 18-9 lead, but the Hawks went on an 18-6 scoring run to climb ahead late in the first half. The Ducks battled back, however, to top St. Joseph's on a 10-2 run of their own for a 34-29 Oregon lead.

The Ducks kept their grip on the lead until 14:07 of the second half when the Hawks grabbed a 48-47 advantage.

Despite shooting better than the Hawks from the field, Oregon's weaknesses shown through in being outbounded, 42-32, and outgunned from three-point land by St. Joseph's.

"The key to the outcome was the rebounding where we allowed St. Joseph's a lot of offensive boards," said Coach Elwin Heiny. "They got a lot of second shots from their offensive rebounds which resulted in a lot of points."

Freshman Debbie Sporcich hit on eight of 13 field goal attempts for a team-high 16 points for the Ducks.

After failing to hold on to its early lead, Oregon played sloppy basketball in the first half and lost to 23rd-ranked Rutgers, 70-58, Saturday night in New Jersey.

The Ducks owned a comfortable 16-8 lead midway through the opening half but surrendered its advantage to a 16-1 Lady Knights' scoring spree.

Rutgers forward Vicky Picott ignited the charge with six of her game-high 16 points during this run, which put the Knights in front, 24-17.

Poor ball handling, shooting, and rebounding drastically hurt the Ducks against Rutgers.
