Nine Days Wonder recording first album

By Layne Lakefish
Emerald Entertainment Editor

The story, or better yet the song, began many years ago.

At a bring-your-own-instrument party in Eugene, five men joined forces. Five years later, Nine Days Wonder was born.

And by March, the band will have more to show for its music than local concert posters. It will have an album.

The recording of the band's first album (in the form of cassettes and compact discs only) has had its ups and downs, but the musicians are working long hours to create a professional, polished product.

"I'm going to listen to it in my earphones while I'm sitting on my couch and I want to like it," said Dave Coey, bass and vocals for the band. "I don't want to hear wrong notes."

The group has also recognized the other end of the spectrum, calling the recording experience tiring, tough and grueling.

"We're a live band," said Mike Walker, the band's Hammond B-3 and piano player. "In the studio, the whole mentality is different."

"On stage, you try new things and take chances, but in the studio you can't do that," he said.

The group has been in the studio since the beginning of November and will wrap up the whole project at the end of January after taking a month off in the middle to tour the Rocky Mountain area.

The cassettes and compact disks, when they hit the stores, will tell the whole musical story.

In the beginning, the band called itself Help on the Way. Within the first year, it had earned itself a gig at Taylor's, lost a member, gained a member, and changed names.

"Taylor's always gets credit for giving us a chance," said Phil White, drummer, "even though four of the five of us were only 18 years old."

"We were the Wednesday bar band at Taylor's," said Ben Sturgill, guitar and vocals.

Because Taylor's opened its doors for Help on the Way, it's only fitting that Taylor's was an inspiration on other levels as well.

"We were sitting outside the bar on the sidewalk making posters for our show, and we said 'OK, fine, we'll do it,'" Coey said. From that moment on, the band became known as Nine Days Wonder, and the group started gaining fans all over Eugene.

"We were pretty much an instant hit in the college community," said Peter Bach, guitar and vocals. "People were looking for a band they could relate to."

Nine Days Wonder spent the next few years impressing audiences in Eugene and Portland, and then split for a year in 1985. With the break, the members weren't sure if they would ever get back together. Luckily for their fans, they did.

In 1986 they reunited, started finetuning their style and started to practice seriously. Then, last summer, the band finally stepped out of the Eugene/Portland area and booked dates through the Rockies and into Colorado and Utah.

Now the group has a reputation across the country for its indescribable sound. And with dates booked all the way through March, it shows.

"We have a fresh, original West Coast sound," White said. "I'm talking original rock 'n' roll."

For Coey, it's a slightly different type of rock. "We play organic, western boogie rock," he said.

But, Bach said, the music contains an even larger conglomeration of sounds. "There's an element of country in it," he said, "but it's not twangy. It's more folk."

"Basically we start out at urban folk and then move up to in-your-face psychedelic jams," Sturgill said. "We're very dynamic."

So it's a veritable melting pot of musical genres. But there's even more to it than that.

"Our music is honest," Bach said, explaining the psychological end of their music. "It's not a lot of show. It's a lot of integrity."

"Overall, it's intellectual rock 'n' roll with a hell of a lot of soul," he said. "Whatever it's called or however it's defined, it will be available soon at local record stores for individual analysis."

Christmas Gift Faire, sponsored by the Oregon Homecrafters Association, will be held at the Lane County Fairgrounds from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. today and Saturday, and from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Sunday. Admission is free.

MONDAY, DEC. 3

Krause Gallery will open a photography and sculpture exhibit featuring the works of University students Krishna Kassebaum and Devin Field. A free public reception will open the exhibit from 7-9 p.m. in the gallery, Room 101 in Lawrence Hall. The gallery is open from 9 a.m. to 4:45 p.m. Monday through Friday. The exhibit will run through Dec. 7.

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 5

EMU Winter Craft Fair opens today and runs through tomorrow in the EMU's Fir Room from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. The fair will feature local artists with unique handcrafted items. Free hot apple cider will be served and admission is free.

University Museum of Natural History, 1680 E. 15th Ave., will open an exhibition of bird nests and eggs from various habitats in Oregon. The museum is open from noon to 5 Wednesday through Sunday, and a $1 donation is suggested.

Ken Babbs, author of On the Bus, will be in the EMU's Ben Linder Room at 2 and 4 p.m. for book signing. Admission is free and copies of the book will be available for purchase.
