Fire causes dorm room damage

A small fire that started early Sunday morning in a first floor room of Earl Hall's Young dormitory caused the evacuation of all students and an estimated $200 in damage.

Young dormitory Resident Assistant Kirsten Rappaport said the fire started shortly after midnight when a student stepped out of her room, leaving a candle burning inside.

The Office of Public Safety was called but the fire was out by the time an officer arrived, Rappaport said. All students were evacuated as a precaution as soon as the fire was detected, she added.

The fire did not spread outside the room and the damage was confined to a bed bolster and a side wall, Rappaport said.

"The bolster on one side of the room is charred," she said.

"If we replace the entire bolster, it will cost $140. That side of the room needs to be painted, so it will probably total around $200."

The student will be held responsible for the cost, Rappaport said.

No one from the Office of Public Safety or University Housing was available for comment Sunday.
