BIKING

"Our goal is to go beyond rides to events and festivals," Mason said. "We hope to make Lane County as big for mountain bikers as Moab, Utah and Crested Butte, Colo. The potential is great because we have everything from coastal rain forest to desert."

The money for the new edition will come from the Lane County Tourism Promotion Program, funded by a county-wide tax on hotels, motels and bed and breakfasts.

In addition to the money to the Outdoor Program, the county commissioners granted another $10,000 to a private firm for the production of a seven-minute mountain biking video that will help promote the guide book.

"There's not much money in the general fund this year to promote outdoor activities, and the room-tax money can only be spent to promote tourism. When they're tied together like this, I think it's a natural," said Lane County Commissioner Steve Cornacchia, who supported the grants.

The guide will be distributed through national forest outlets and local bike shops. A few copies of the current guide, now in its third printing, are still available at the Outdoor Program Headquarters in the EMU for $1.

LAW

"The ABA has given us an extension until June so if we were going to take any action (the University) has to do it now," he said.

The cuts come at a time when the school has received over 2,200 applications for admittance, the highest number in the history of the school.

With the cuts, only 90 to 125 students will be admitted to the school in the fall. This compares to 180 students who were admitted last fall.

The quality of the school is not expected to be affected and Brand said complaints from the ABA have been in terms of financial support and not quality of education.

The school has improved its revenue sources during the last biennium in several ways, including the addition of a resource fee to the tuition first-year law students pay and increasing private fund raising totals by 20 percent.

Brand said that in light of the reduced enrollment level the resource fee may have to be re-evaluated. He also praised students across the state for their work in bringing the effects of Measure 5 to the attention of legislators.
