1991 folk festival Friday

Eugene's Kitov will play traditional and contemporary Jewish music Friday at 1 p.m.

Kitov opens 21st annual folk festival

The festive sounds of Eugene's own Kitov will open this year's Willamette Valley Folk Festival.

The band performs music from traditional Israeli dances and songs from the contemporary Jewish renewal movement. Their performance offers the fun and excitement of the festivities that usually follow a Jewish wedding.

Kitov will perform Friday on the Main Stage at 1 p.m.

Tracey's dish out harmony and instrumentals

Contemporary acoustic folk, blues and swing is on The Tracey's agenda for their performance at 2 p.m. Friday on the Main Stage.

The band's three part harmonies are backed by instrumentation on harmonica, guitar and bass. The Eugene-based group includes brothers Michael and Larry Tracey, playing harmonica and guitar, respectively; Anne Tracey, vocalist; and Jim Partitt, bass guitarist.

Joining The Tracey's at their folk festival performance will be fiddler David Burham, who plays with both The Eugene Symphony and The Swing Beans.

The Tracey's have performed in numerous Willamette Valley markets, fairs and festivals during the past three years. Major appearances this year include performances at the The Art and Vineyard Festival in Eugene, The Oregon Folklife Festival in Corvallis, and their performance at this year's Folk Festival.

The Tracey's perform Friday at 2 p.m.
