THE FOUR ARROWS FE-AS-KO A NOVEL BY RANDALL BETH PLATT

When the owner of Oregon's largest cattle ranch—The Four Arrows—is shot by his horse in a freak accident, Royal Leckner suddenly finds himself charged with teaching the owner's retarded son to take over management of the ranch. The son, Leviticus Perrault, comes as part of an unmatched set, which includes Toofer, a man spit between bickering Confederate and Union personalities; Tommy Two Hearts, half-white, half-Indian, and half-paralyzed; and Lou(ella), an idiot savante. With the help of some cowhands and an uppity lady accountant, Royal and his crew try to run the ranch despite the connivings of the entire county.

The magic and humor of The Four Arrows Fe-As-Ko lie in the charming gusto of its narrator. Looking back in the 1890s youth from the vantage point of the 1930s old age, Royal laughs at himself more than at anyone else.

RANDALL BETH PLATT lives in Gig Harbor, Washington, and travels the country playing in handball tournaments. This is her first novel to be published, and the first of what she hopes will be several Royal Leckner novels.
