

CELEBRATE

writer toss will begin. Teams of a secretary and boss will compete for prizes by throwing a dilapidated typewriter as far as possible.

Following the typewriter toss, there will be two other fun matches, including an obstacle course and time trial, played by teams of waiters and waitresses as they exhibit their professional skills and pride; and a Bucket Brigade competition, where teams compete to be first to complete emptying and filling a water tank.

Another promising game to catch will be the spectacular Eggloft rocket launch. Participants will be required to build a rockets to carry an egg. Participants are entitled to three launches, whereby only eggs that are safely landed will be judged. Judging will be based on altitude reached and the design of the rocket. The Eggloft launch will take place in Amazon Park at the pool parking lot at 12:30 p.m.

Art exhibitions offer appreciative celebrants a contemplative moment from the glee of games and dances. During the celebration, the Mayor's Art Show, a prestigious juried exhibit of Lane County artists, will be on display until Oct. 31 at the Hult Center.

There will also be an exhibition on local architecture projects by the American Institute of Architects Display during the weekend celebration. This exhibition will be held in Eugene Conference Center, adjacent to the Hilton.

Registration forms for the athletic events and further information about the Eugene Celebration is available at its summer office, 35 W. Eighth Avenue. The telephone number is 687-5215.

The Eugene facility regularly updates the facility and equipment to compensate for the growth rate in the fitness industry. For instance, the latest aerobic programs involving step and bench workouts have recently been added.

Kelley said the organization's mission is "to provide Christian programming to develop an individual's total body, mind and spirit." Although the organization's philosophy is based on Christian ideals, the YMCA embraces all religions. All programs place emphasis on the mind, spirit and body — the three components symbolized in the YMCA's triangle logo.

In the pursuit of meeting the YMCA mission statement, the YMCA encompasses all realms of health and wellness. A program for the developmentally disabled has been devised to provide therapy aid to the 50 to 75 members who use wheelchairs.

Non-fitness classes such as an arthritis support group, an after-school child care program and camp opportunities for high school students, are also offered for YMCA members.

A "Volunteer Connection" is available to help community members use skills to help those in need, and a "Creative Unemployment" program offers the unemployed access to the YMCA to improve health while providing counseling for job opportunities. The YMCA also operates the Voluntary Action Center, a clearinghouse for volunteers and volunteer organizations.

The YMCA also offers a national program for members that allows participants to visit YMCA facilities across the nation. The "AWAY" program stands for "Always Welcome At the Y." For students who purchase twelve-month memberships and return home for the summer, their Eugene YMCA membership allows them to visit the local YMCA in their home town without a fee.

Volunteers are an integral part of the non-profit, charitable organization. Although membership dues and donations support the facility, additional funds are needed each year to provide scholarships and financial aid to low-income families and members in need of aid.
