

In the face

USC tailback Mazio Royster (left) stiffarms Oregon linebacker Andy Conner during the Trojan's 30-14 victory over Oregon Saturday at Autzen Stadium. Royster led the USC attack with 132 yards rushing. See story, Page 18

Photo by Jeff Paslay

Violent attacks mar summer

By Dennis Fitzgerald
Emerald Reporter

The University received more than 90 incident reports between July 1 and Sept. 26. Most were thefts, but some involved serious crimes, such as attempted rape, sexual abuse and arson, according to records from the University Office of Public Safety.

An attempted rape was reported on the night of Aug. 3. A white female, 35, was attacked on Ferry Street between 13th and 14th Avenues by a man who knocked her down, pulled a knife and threatened to kill her if she screamed.

She escaped after hitting the attacker in the groin and later was treated for deep head lacerations at Sacred Heart General Hospital, according to the report. It was not clear how the woman's head was cut.

No arrest was made.

On Aug. 5, a white female, 22, was sexually abused by a man on East 16th Avenue, near High and Mill Streets.

The assailant pulled her T-shirt out of her pants, knocked her to the ground, put his hand under her shirt and grabbed her breasts. Her screams brought neighbors running.

The man was chased but not caught. No physical injuries were reported.

Another sexual abuse allegedly occurred on July 21. Patrick Hamilton Bynoe, 48, of 768 Montrose, Palo Alto, Calif., was arrested for posing as a trainer at a Track City Track Club meet for handling the thighs, buttocks and genitals of two minor girls, according to OPS records.

Racial harassment was reported on Sept. 23. According to the report, three white men, who were about to enter the Phi Kappa Psi fraternity on 729 E. 11th Street, repeatedly yelled "nigger" at a man who was across the street.

After entering the house, at least one of the men continued to yell "nigger" at the man through an open

Turn to CRIMES, Page 7

University gets $14.55 million from fundraising

By Dennis Fitzgerald
Emerald Reporter

Gifts to the University hit an all-time high during fiscal 1990-91, totaling $14.55 million, administration officials said.

That's an increase of seven percent, compared with last year's combined fundraising total of $13.6 million, for the University-at-large and the University of Oregon Foundation.

The foundation is a public charitable organization, qualified by the State Board of Higher Education, that receives and administers gifts to the University.

"These gifts are an integral part of the University's effort to promote excellence, especially in undergraduate education," said President Myles Brand. "They provide the means to recruit and retain outstanding faculty members."

Officials said the successful effort enabled the University to make significant progress in two key areas:

- Requirements were met to receive state matching funds for faculty support; and
- Expansion and renovation was begun at the Knight Library.

Alumni financial gifts increase; some money helps new library

Because the University raised $6 million in faculty support funds, the state will provide matching funds equal to the income generated by the $6 million. Faculty support money is funding source.

Gift support, in addition to state funding, enabled the University to break ground on expansion and renovation plans for the Knight Library.

Work is now in progress on a 130,000-square-foot library addition that is expected to cost $27.4 million, of which $9.35 million is expected to come from private gifts. Designed to meet the library's needs for the next 20 years, the construction project will increase the existing building's space by 56 percent, more than double room for seating, and increase the shelving capacity by 27 percent.

Other projects funded partially or entirely by gifts to the University include a major addition to Lawrence Hall, which houses the School of Architecture and Allied Arts; a 75th anniversary celebration at the School of Journalism; and the continuing UO Presidential Scholarship Program that now awards $2,000 a year for up to

'These gifts are an integral part of the University's efforts to promote excellence, especially in undergraduate education'

— Myles Brand,
University president essential for attracting and retaining outstanding teachers.

The colleges of business administration and arts and sciences, as well as the Oregon Humanities Center, have benefited particularly from this four years to incoming freshmen.

In addition, gift money will support a new building on the north side of Hayward Field that will house track and field offices, the International Institute for Sport and Human Performance and Microform Publications.

Among the major donations were:

- $260,000 from a trust established by Calvin Reed Smith and Merle King Smith of Edmonds, Wash., to fund the Calvin Reed Smith and Merle King Smith Center for Marketing and Development in the College of Business Administration;

- $1,141,258 from the trust estate of Walter E. Kidd, a teacher, writer, poet and scholar from Portland, to establish the Walter and Nancy Kidd Fund, which will provide scholarships for students in creative writing; and

- $100,000 given anonymously, which will be augmented with matching funds from the state and the National Endowment for the Humanities for a total of $240,000, to establish a visiting professorship at the Oregon Humanities Center.

INDEX

Remember...

Today is the last day to drop a class without a $10 fee.

Scandal

Been wondering about electronic mail, the Springfield Human Rights Commission and City Council? The Emerald's Pat Malach sums it all up for you.

See column, Page 13

Payback

President Bush came to town, and the city of Portland and Sen. Bob Packwood's re-election campaign fund are footing the bill.

See story, Page 16

Heartbreak

The Oregon's women volleyball team suffered a tough loss Friday, falling to Arizona State in a grueling four-game match, 15-10, 4-15, 15-12, 16-14.

See story, Page 20