ROOF

year-round, Hecht said.

He said the timing on the Columbia roof project has been difficult because funding was not confirmed until July 1, yet it must be completed before the rain starts.

Hecht said inspection of the roof two years ago indicated that it had three or four good years left, but that another inspection this past summer showed the roof might not make it through the winter.

The roof construction is almost half completed, and is expected to be finished within 10 days, around the time that interior repairs and changes will be finished.

The classroom is one of about 30 that have been renovated, and now has new paint, screens, bulletin boards, podiums and asbestos-free flooring. New chairs are expected to be installed this weekend.

In addition, Hecht said about 75 percent of the building roofs on campus have been repaired recently.

"At this stage of the game we have a lot of our roof problems cured," he said. "Things were in pretty bad shape a few years ago."
