Though only a freshman, Stephanie Warren has started every game for Oregon this season.

Frosh fantastic for Oregon volleyball team this year

The Oregon volleyball team expected to improve on last season's record because it returned everyone from last year's team.

Unexpected was the major contribution of a group of freshmen who have played important roles in leading the Ducks to a spot in the national rankings for much of the year.

The four freshmen, redshirt Kalie Kerr and true freshmen Stephanie Warren, Angee Henderson and LaReina Woods, are also all in-state players, which adds up to quite an Oregon recruiting class.

"We really haven't had this kind of impact from a freshman class since Molly (McGrath), Dawnn (Charroin), Julie (Jeffery) and Ali (Watkins) came through," Oregon Coach Gerry Gregory said of the 1988 recruits.

This year, Warren has started every match. Henderson has played in all but two games, and Woods has started the last five matches. Kerr, who is a setter, has had limited playing time while serving as a backup to McGrath, a senior.

All four players were stars in high school, and each was named to Oregon's all-state volleyball teams.

Before coming to Eugene, Warren had an outstanding career in leading Gresham High School to three straight state volleyball titles. She earned All-American honors, as well as being named league Most Valuable Player twice and state player of the year her junior and senior seasons.

Warren is third on the team in kills and digs this season and fifth in blocks.

"Stephanie is so good in all her skills," said Gregory. "She's nice and solid for us, and she's a person we feel we can have in there when it's a real key situation."

Henderson, who led Thurston High School of Springfield to four league championships, was a teammate of Warren's on the Northwest Juniors, a top club team. She is one of Oregon's top blockers, currently ranking fourth on the team.

"She's really added a lot to the team," Gregory said. "When she came into the front line [against Arizona] we really went into high gear."

Woods, whose brother Marcus plays for the Oregon football team, shares Oregon's match-high mark for kills this season, putting down 20 against Oregon State.

"LaReina is very dynamic," Gregory said. "A lot of good things happen for our team when she's on the court. She's the quickest person on our team."

Next spring, Woods will take that quickness to the Oregon track team, where she will run sprints. She was Oregon's 4A high school champion in the 100- and 200-meter sprints four years in a row.

Kerr, a former hitter for South Salem High School, red-shirted last year to spend time learning the intricacies of the setter position.

Kerr said changing positions has been interesting — and frustrating.

"It's been kind of tough," she said. "I've kind of had to go back to the basics."

"Kalie's done a really good job every time she's had the chance," Gregory said.

All four players have noticed major differences in the transition from high school volleyball to the Pacific-10 Conference, the toughest conference in the country.

"It's a lot more competitive, and it takes a lot more time and energy," Warren said. "The practices are also a lot longer."

In addition to their obvious commitments to volleyball, these four had other reasons for bringing their talents to Oregon.

"I liked the tradition," Woods said.

"There were a lot of things I considered," Henderson said. "The science program [at Oregon] was the best out of the schools I was looking at. I'm real close to my family, and so it has worked out for the better that way."

Not to mention better for Gregory and for Duck volleyball.
