ROCK this WAY

Doobies, Salgado to hit Hult

By Mia Bertelsen

Eugene better get ready because The Doobie Brothers are prepared to show this town just what rock 'n' roll is all about.

On Monday, Oct. 7, they'll take to the Hult Center stage, with Curtis Salgado and the Stiletos opening.

Brotherhood is the 14th album released by The Doobies, and it features their latest single "Dangerous." "Brotherhood is a continuation of what we've been doing for a long time," said Patrick Simmons, guitarist and singer, in a press release.

Brotherhood's songs are a combination of the rock 'n' roll the Doobies are known for, along with smooth ballads and a new funk-rock sound. "This album represents the roots of the band, and the lineup is the true foundation," Simmons said. "It's an honest representation of where we started and, at the same time, it shows where we're headed."

The album has some of the strongest sounds of their career so far. It also serves to reestablish the close fellowship of the Doobies themselves, as it features all five of the original band members.

Curtis Salgado and the Stiletos are the opening act that promises to show the audience a "killer band," Curtis Salgado said.

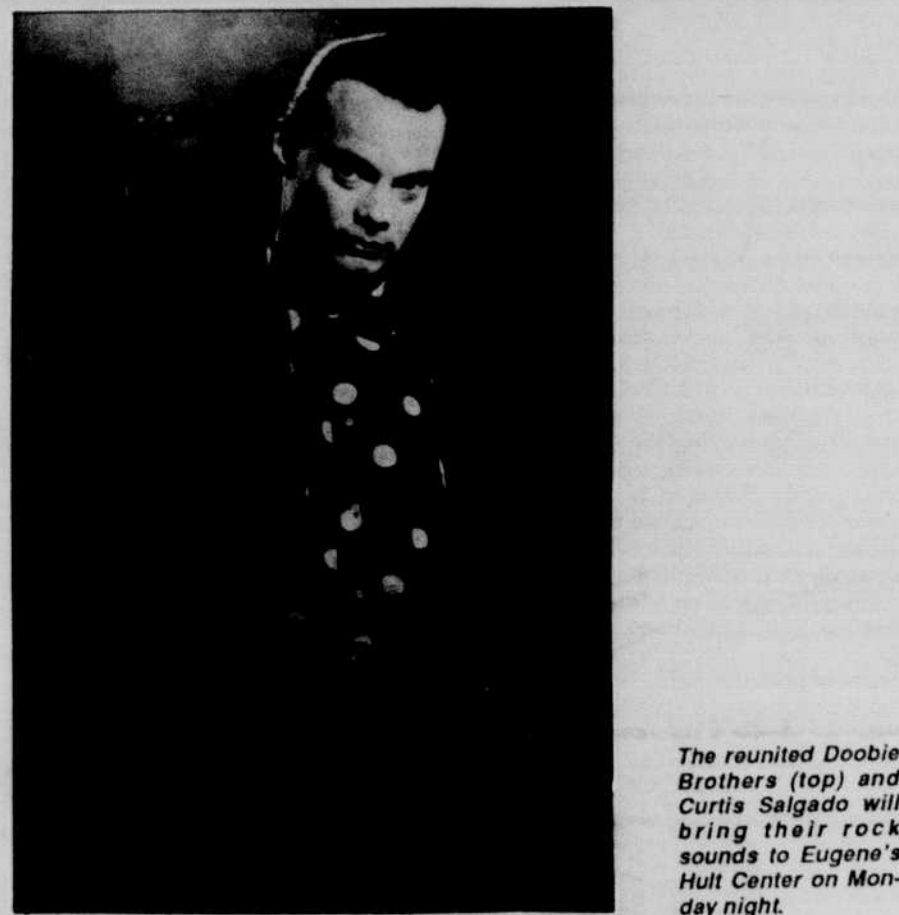

"We are just getting better everytime we play. We are a rather fresh mix of rock, blues, funk and soul that is unique because it has my own special stamp to it."

For Salgado, performing in Eugene is reminiscent of earlier days filled with interesting meetings. It was in this city that Salgado first met Robert Cray when they each had their own band.

"Robert and I grew up together in a sense," Salgado said. "He moved from Tacoma to Eugene and I helped him get work here for his band. We learned a lot from each other." They eventually merged their bands and played every Monday night at the Eugene Hotel.

There's more. It was also at the Eugene Hotel where John Belushi found the inspiration for the famous Blues Brothers act. "I was doing the songs like 'Soul Man,' 'Hey Bartender' and 'Groove Me,' and John decided to do the skit on Saturday Night Live based on my act," Salgado said.

The show starts at 8 p.m. and tickets are $18. For information or to purchase tickets, call 687-5000.
