

Talks begin at peace conference

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Israelis and Arabs held historic talks Wednesday aimed at overcoming four decades of hostility and war in the Middle East. President Bush implored them to strike a deal centered on territorial compromise and permanent treaties.

"Peace in the Middle East need not be a dream," Bush said at the opening of the first peace talks in a generation.

Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev forcefully seconded the call for compromise. "It would be unforgivable to miss this opportunity," he said.

However, in a chilling reminder of the Middle East's bloody politics, an Iranian lawmaker influential with Lebanese terrorists said Wednesday all peace conference participants should be killed.

But such extreme opposition to the conference was the exception, not the rule, in much of the Arab world. "The battle for peace begins," said a banner headline Wednesday in Jordan's biggest newspaper, Al-Rai.

Syria, Israel's most implacable foe, stuck to its traditional hard line. After the ceremonial opening of the conference, one Syrian official in Madrid said Damascus might pull out of the peace process unless there are key Israeli concessions.

The Palestinians, too, expressed disappointment that Bush did not openly back their demand for a freeze on settlements in the occupied lands, or specifically express support for Palestinian statehood.

But many in Madrid were expressing optimism despite deep differences.

Secretary of State James Baker, who spent months setting up the conference, said Israel and its Arab neighbors "began to crawl" toward peace. But at a news conference after Wednesday's talks, he admitted no agreement had been reached on where planned bilateral talks would be held.

"It is very important that these bilateral talks take place," Baker said. "It is (where) we hope the real substance will take place."

At a separate news conference, a top Israeli official, Deputy Foreign Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, said, "I think on the whole this has been a very good day for the prospects of peace."

"We come here with an open heart and an open mind," Kamel Abu Jaber, the Jordanian foreign minister, said at his news conference.

Still, Egyptian Foreign Minister Amr Moussa, who met with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir on Wednesday, said there were "a lot" of obstacles ahead.

Egypt is the only Arab country to have ever made peace with Israel, and Moussa was the first Arab delegate to address the gathering.

In his speech, he demanded recognition of the rights of Palestinians, denounced Jewish settlements in occupied lands and insisted Israel should not "exercise a monopoly" over Je-
