

TALKS

Seated in the chandeliered Hall of Columns of the Spanish royal palace, Arabs and Jews listened in silence as each delegate used his allotted speaking time to deliver his history of the Arab-Israeli conflict and his vision of peace.

Their fundamental differences were evident, even in their reading of history.

Shamir saw Israel as the victim of sustained Arab "boycott, blockade, terrorism and outright war."

Syria's al-Sharaa said that but for Israel, "millions of Arabs — Palestinians, Syrians and Lebanese — would not have been uprooted from their homes."

Jordan's Abu Jaber said "the Palestinians and Jordan have paid the price" of the Nazi Holocaust that drove the Jews to seek new homes in Palestine.

Abu Jaber conceded that "most Arabs, out of a sense of outrage and feelings of injustice and betrayal, have refused since 1947 to contemplate accommodation."

But "if this conference does anything it must end Israel's self-righteous attitude to live by its own rules alone," the Jordanian said. To back Jordan's cause, King Hussein appeared via live TV hookup from Amman — the second Middle East leader to show up, albeit electronically, at the conference.

Al-Sharaa delivered the harshest speech, even ridiculing the Jews' claim to their biblical homeland.

"If the entire world were to adopt such claims it would have to encourage all Christians to emigrate to the Vatican and all Muslims to holy Mecca," he said.

Afterward, Shamir commented on Israel radio: "Several days ago I said the conference will not be a rose garden, but today it was a whole garden of thorns."
