Talks progress despite obstacles

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Israelis and Palestinians on Sunday had a "good, businesslike" session in the first day of their direct talks, but the Israelis said similar talks with arch-foe Syria were unproductive and frustrating.

A Lebanese delegation also held separate talks with Israel on Sunday in the first day of the second phase of the Middle East peace talks.

"I think it was a good beginning," Secretary of State James A. Baker III, who engineered the peace conference, said after the talks between Israel and a joint Palestinian-Jordanian delegation ended.

"We intend to stay fully engaged, as fully engaged as we can and for as long as we think the parties are serious about peace. And for the moment I think they are serious."

The five-hour Israeli-Syrian talks, although contentious, were a milestone simply by Syria's agreement to meet.

"This is the first direct bilateral meeting between Israeli and Syrian delegates ... We have to register the fact with some satisfaction," Yossi Ben-Aharon, head of the Israeli team, told reporters early Monday.

The Israelis and the Palestinian-Jordanian delegation displayed an amiable spirit after their talks, in contrast to a week of confrontational speeches and snubs during last week's ceremonial opening phase of the historic Madrid talks.

Still to be settled is where the substantive negotiations will be held. In a joint statement, the two sides said they would consult about when and where to hold substantive talks, "which it is hoped will take place soon."

Palestinian leader Hanan Ashrawi later said the resumption could be in two to three weeks.

The Palestinians later said that during the meeting they had demanded a freeze on Israeli settlements in the occupied West Bank and Gaza strip. Israel has so far refused to freeze the settlement-building.

"This is a welcome day for peace," said the chief Israeli delegate, Deputy Foreign Minister Benjamin Netanyahu. "We have now an Israel that is ringed with a circle of talks and we hope it will replace the circle of guns that surrounds us."

Baker, speaking of the site and timing of future meetings, said: "This is an open question." But he called the Israeli-Palestinian meeting a "breakthrough."

He said he had no reason to expect a walkout by Syria or any of the other parties.

"If that were going to be the case I think we would have seen it by now," Baker said.

Syria, balking at Israel's insistence on shifting the negotiations to the Middle East, hesitated before attending the procedural session with Israel on Sunday.

In the session, the Syrians "kept referring again and again and again (to) only withdrawal from territories. They said before you withdraw from territories, from the Golan Heights, we cannot discuss anything," said Ben-Aharon, the Israeli delegate. The Syrian delegation had no immediate comment.

Baker said the United States and the Soviet Union might step in and make the venue decision in the event of a long delay. U.S. officials said privately Washington was a possible choice.

After the Israeli-Palestinian talks, the participants shook hands for photographers, and the chief Israeli delegate, Elikim Rubinstein, referred to his Arab counterparts as "my friends here." At one point he answered a question both in Arabic, with the word "Inshallah," and in Hebrew, with the words "Im yirtzeh Hashem" — both meaning "God willing."

ercise because it showed how we have taken advantage of our resources," Evanson said. "The world is going to be in their hands so it gave me a good feeling to know that they know what is going on."

Evanson said the kids were surprisingly cooperative and eager to learn.

"There was a boy who was a little slow," she said. "When he asked a question he stuttered a little bit. None of the kids made fun of him. They were all very supportive and tried to help him out. It didn't seem that way when I was in school."

In another activity, two counselors would take their group to a section of the woods. Each child would find his or her own spot and sit and listen or write for half an hour.

After a bell rang, the teacher would pass the bell around and talk about what they saw or wrote.

The last night at camp the kids have a bead ceremony, Evanson said. The kids get seven white ones and six colored ones. The white ones stand for the seven letters, and the colored ones stand for the resources: air, water, sun, plants, animals and soil.

Evanson said she learned a lot from the experience, and would recommend it to anyone. "There's so much to learn about. Nothing is man-made out there," she said. "We have to adapt to the environment because nothing is touched out there. Nothing is built, and nothing is cut down."
