Women ready for season

The Oregon women's basketball team begins its season Saturday much like it did a year ago: young.

But youth is not necessarily bad in the case of the Ducks. They are certainly still a young team but by no means are inexperienced. Oregon returns the core of its 13-15 team from last year to McArthur Court Saturday at 4 p.m. for an exhibition game against Tungsram, Hunga-

Oregon returns 11 players and has added five newcomers to the program. Sophomore Debbie Sporcich, the lone Duck to start all 28 games last year, is Oregon's top returner after averaging 15 points and 10 rebounds a game last season.

Coach Elwin Heiny, beginning his 16th season at Oregon, sees positive things for this year's squad if it is able to make it past three pre-season opponents who visited the NCAA tournament last year.

"If we survive our pre-season schedule, we will be a very good team," said Heiny, who is only 13 wins shy of reaching 300 career coaching victories "We're counting on experience a lot. That's a year under our

Saturday, the Ducks take on California, which is 10-10 on the season, but 7-5 and fifth place in the Pac-10. The Golden Bears beat Oregon in four games in the earlier meeting, a match Gregory said was one the Ducks should have won.

Oregon probably needs at least a split this weekend if it is to finish the season above .500. Three of the Ducks' last five matches, including this weekend's, are against nationally ranked teams.
